Television host Mike Rowe is starting a new TV series called “Return The Favor” and he will be traveling across the country in search of remarkable people making a difference in their communities. Akron resident Carol Stark was recently honored at Cocalico High School’s stadium when the show filmed her in front of hundreds of friends, family and those who have been impacted by her selfless acts of caring over many years.

Mike Rowe himself went and picked Carol up for this surprise event in which the Ephrata Band played and cheerleaders from Cocalico and Ephrata cheered her arrival. The highlights of the evening were the presentation of red roses by those she has impacted the most, as well as the creation of the Carol Stark Foundation, which received a $50,000 donation from the show.

Carol is shown holding her plaque as Mike Rowe and guests celebrate her achievements. The show will air in a couple of months according to the producers.
